SUBJECT: Expanded Rape Policy Update

REPORTING ALERT:
THE IMPLEMENTATION OF EXPANDED RAPE REPORTING IN THE NYS CRIME REPORTING PROGRAM

Summary

In 2012, the U.S. Department of Justice expanded the definition of rape used for the collection of national Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) statistics. Under this new definition, a large number of New York State Article 130 Penal Laws which were previously defined as Part II sex offenses are now classified as a Part I rape.

This reporting alert outlines program modifications made to the state crime reporting program, and the current level of reporting compliance by those law enforcement agencies that participate in the New York State Crime Reporting Program.

New Definition of Rape vs. Historical Definition of Rape

The historical definition of rape, established in 1929, included only female victims penetrated vaginally by a male. The expanded definition of rape encompasses additional offenses and is defined as “penetration, no matter how slight, of the vagina or anus with any body part or object, or oral penetration by a sex organ of another person, without the consent of the victim”. The new definition includes male and female victims, all anal and vaginal sex acts, and any oral sex act that involves another person’s sexual organs. This expanded definition of rape provides a more accurate picture of the scope and volume of rape and sexual assaults.

Role of New York State Crime Reporting Program

In August 2012, the New York State Crime Reporting Program notified all law enforcement agencies of the new reporting requirements associated with the expanded definition of rape. The modification memo outlined changes required at the local level to ensure proper reporting of rape in 2013. A copy of the modification memo is posted on the DCJS public website at http://www.criminaljustice.ny.gov/crimnet/ojsa/crimereporting/rape_memo.pdf.

DCJS modified in-house data collection systems so that crimes classified as historical rape can now be disaggregated from the 2013 expanded definition of rape. This allows New York State to continue to present historical rape trends, analyze the impact of expanding the definition of rape, and provides the Crime Reporting Program with a mechanism to monitor compliance with the new reporting requirements across law enforcement agencies.

Current Status of Expanded Rape Reporting in New York State

Non- New York City

During 2013, 316 (60%) of New York’s 526 active law enforcements agencies outside New York City reported or had the appropriate technical capabilities to report those rapes that meet the newly expanded definition to DCJS¹. These agencies represent 79% of all Part II sex offenses reported to DCJS in 2012. Of the 210 agencies that reported no expanded rapes in 2013, 93 (44%) are small agencies which reported no sex offenses in 2012. These are not jurisdictions from which a significant number of sex crimes are expected to be reported. By looking at the percentage of reported sex offenses that agencies reporting the new rape category represent, we can measure the progress law enforcement has made in transitioning crime reporting to accurately reflect the new category.

As shown in Table 1, the total number of rapes reported by agencies using the newly expanded definition increased by 150% between 2012 and 2013.

Table 1

Non - New York City Reported Rapes
Non-NYC Agencies Reporting Expanded Rape Category	2012 Rape Total	2013 Rape Total		2012 -2013 %Chg.
		Historical Rape	Expanded Rape
		1,099	2,068
316	1,267	3,167		150%

New York City

New York City started reporting the expanded rape category in January 2013. As shown in Table 2, the expanded definition has resulted in a 98% increase in reported rapes in New York City, going from 1,162 in 2012 to 2,299 in 2013. New York City represents 43% of all index crimes reported in New York State in 2012.

¹ For the purpose of defining active law enforcement agencies, the New York State Police and New York State Parks Police are each counted as one law enforcement agency even though they both cover multiple jurisdictions across multiple counties.

Table 2

New York City Reported Rapes
2012 Rape Total	2013 Rape Total		2012 -2013 % Chg.
	Historical Rape	Expanded Rape
	1,112	1,187
1,162	2,299		98%

Dissemination of Expanded Rape Data at the National Level

Two reports published by the FBI, the Semiannual Uniform Crime Report, January to June, 2013 and Crime in the United States, January to December, 2013 will be issued in 2014 and will include the number of reported rapes for specified jurisdictions and states across the country. A footnote denotes if the jurisdiction is reporting according to the new definition. As of January 2014, approximately 47% of these agencies nation-wide have reported rape counts according to the expanded definition. As a result, national rape counts for 2013 do not represent all reported offenses that are included in the expanded definition.

Throughout 2013, DCJS worked to help agencies transition to the new reporting requirement. While many agencies have successfully made the change, others have not. Therefore, the 2013 data on expanded rape do not adequately portray the extent of these particular sex offenses in New York, and will not be reported to the FBI as such. The New York State rape counts published in both the FBI 2013 semiannual and annual reports will continue to represent the historical definition.

Current Reporting Status

DCJS is continuously monitoring the status of expanded rape reporting and tracking the percentage of agencies that have transitioned. Attachment A of this document includes all law enforcement agencies outside New York City and indicates if they have or have not reported the expanded rape category to DCJS as of May 2014. It is important to note that if an agency has not reported the new rape category, this could indicate either that they have not yet made the required reporting change or they have no such crimes to report.

DCJS will publish expanded rape data for agencies that have started to report according to the new definition in the annual Crime in New York State 2014 Preliminary Data report, due out in the Spring of 2015. As the NYS Crime Reporting Program continues to work with law enforcement agencies to assist them in transitioning, it is expected that the percentage of agencies reporting the new rape definition will increase as well as the percent of reported crime those agencies represent across the state. It is anticipated that by 2015, a larger percentage of law enforcement agencies will be in compliance with the new reporting requirements. At that time, DCJS will be in a position to provide statewide counts for expanded rape.
